It seems that commercial airlines do come in handy, and Wesley Goldberg and his friend Dr. William Sherman of Hartford, Conn., will be the first to admit it. Dr. Sherman flew from Connecticut, in his private plane to pick Wes up and the two men took a flying vacation to Texas (the HemisFair), Mexico and then to New Orleans. While in New Orleans a DC9 (a very large DC9, says Wes) damaged their little plane by blowing it over, at which point Wesley and Bill boarded a commercial jet for the trip home. If anyone is passing through New Orleans and would like to pick up one small damaged plane, Wes and Bill would be delighted to have it delivered their way.

It's the personal opinion of Julie Kaufman, daughter of Ed and Ruth Kaufman, that the Russian march on Czechoslovakia came as a sudden and complete surprise to the people. Julie had gone there for a five-day stay in Brno and Prague after spending 6 weeks in Austria with the Experiment in International Living Group. The atmosphere was calm and many of the people she saw and spoke with were not showing any signs of anxiety. Julie left Prague on a Wednesday, and the Russians arrived the following Wednesday... Julie is now home and preparing for her return to Stanford University in Calif., where she will be studying in the Graduate School for her Ph.D. in English.

Labor Day weekend found many of our residents in lovely warm places, and with the damp cool weather we had here at home I'm sure that Mr. and Mrs. Neal Cohan more than enjoyed their wonderful week-end in St. Croix, the Virgin Islands. Also enjoying the sunny warm weather, but this time in Miami Beach were Anne and Alvin Levenson and their daughters Lori and Martha, who spent the Labor Day weekend enjoying the last lazy days of the summer vacation.

With the coming of the fall season the business of organizational work comes to the fore and one of our town's busiest men, Gerald Kraft, with wife Cookie and daughter Karen, will be attending the Supreme Lodge B'nai B'rith Convention in Washington, D.C. Joan Leventhal who is in charge of the Information Booth and Hostesses at Lafayette Square, and one of her lovely hostesses is Sharon Doner. Then there's Faye Schechter the "Thin Lady", Nachama Levy in an office downtown, Pearl Wides at Winona Hospital and Helen Silverstein at Rosts. ## Make It Stronger Than Arabs

Israel Issue Removed From Election By Nixon

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Israel was taken out of the election as an issue Sunday night when Richard Nixon told a B'nai B'rith audience here that Israel should be made stronger than the Arabs in order to avoid renewed hostilities in the Middle East.

In a strong statement on the Middle East situation, Nixon blamed Russia and the Arabs, and called for a position of strength by the United States in order to prevent a takeover by Russia of the Middle East.

What looked like a shoo in for the Jewish vote for Vice President Hubert Humphrey, long a forceful friend of Israel, shifted precipitately. Nixon came from paying homage to Dr. Billy Graham directly to a Jewish arena, where incidentally one of the best press department in the Jewish field, did not announce his appearance in advance.

"THE DANGER OF war increases in direct ratio to the confidence of certain Arab leaders that they could win that war," Nixon said, and blamed the Soviet Union for fueling these aggressive ambitions with the hardware of war.

"To a disturbing extent, they have introduced new and more sophisticated weapons," Nixon said of the Soviets. "Their Middle Eastern clients are growing more confident that they can win a war of revenge and drive Israel into the sea."

"Therefore, the Free World must act to maintain a balance of power to remove the conflicts of would-be aggressors," Nixon said. Although this is a short range solution, "when survival is at stake short-term solutions are necessary," he said.

HE MADE it clear that Israel should remain militarily stronger than its Arab neighbors in order to offset their numerical superiority and added:

"If maintaining that margin should require that the U.S. supply Israel with supersonic Phantom F-4 jets — we should supply those Phantom jets."

NIXON TOLD THE delegates he wasn't addressing them as a politician seeking "Jewish votes" but as an American concerned about the "two great issues of our time — peace abroad and peace at home."

He said the "Mideast today presents the greatest danger of exploding in nuclear holocaust."

The former vice-president didn't predict this explosion to come this year or next year or three years from now, but said the Mideast posed a much greater threat of a "great power explosion" than any other area, including Southeast Asia.

NIXON ADDRESSED the Jewish organization after a top-level State Department briefing by Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Llewellyn Thompson, U.S. ambassador to Russia, and other officials.

He said Russia and its Warsaw Pact allies in June of 1966 had "blatantly declared the incorporation of the Middle East into the Communist sphere to be one of their aims."

Since then, he added, they provided arms and "unleashed a propaganda campaign that inflamed tensions and led to the six day war; increased their ships in the Mediterranean fourfold to nearly 50 ships and moved a fleet into the Persian Gulf and stepped up their anti-Semitic propaganda in Eastern Europe."

"THESE ARE clear cut moves of a super power seeking domination," Nixon said and went on to charge that the response of the Johnson administration had been "uncertain and ineffectual."

"We can hardly ignore the fact that during the past five years of active Soviet penetration, the U.S. government has at times seemed to hide its head in the sands of the Middle East," he said.

"This administration has failed to come to diplomatic grips with the scope and seriousness of the Soviet threat," Nixon said.

He said the United States had a "firm and unwavering commitment to the national existence of Israel" because its example offers "long range help to the Middle East."

FOLLOWING HIS prepared policy statement, Nixon discussed what he termed the other "great issue of our time" — law and order.

"We're not going to be able to fulfill the mission of bringing peace abroad unless we can demonstrate that we can keep the peace at home," he said. "Order without progress is to loud applause."

Nixon, who has made frequent reference to the need for "law and order" in speeches across the country, took note of recent criticism that the phrase "law and order" is "simply a code word for racism."

"YOU CANNOT HAVE order without progress," he said. "Order without progress is tyranny." But he said that by the same token, "you cannot have progress without order."

Progress without order is anarchy." And he again was loudly applauded when he declared: "There is no cause in my view which justifies lawlessness and violence."

The Manifold Lives of Cyrus Adler

Cyrus Adler was one of those rare people who, from time to time, come along to astonish the world with the vast variety of their activities. At the age of 20, he received his B.A. from the University of Pennsylvania and promptly enrolled in the graduateschool of Johns Hopkins. There he became the first student to attain a Ph. D. in Semitics in an American university.

Shortly after his graduation Adler became an Associate Professor in Semitics. He found the time to become Assistant Curator of the U.S. National Museum. In 1892, Adler was named Librarian of the Smithsonian Institution, whose Assistant Secretary he became seven years later. One would think he had made his mark, but his career was just beginning.

While still at the Smithsonian, Adler had a hand in establishing the Jewish Theological Seminary and the Jewish Publication Society. He was a founder of the American Jewish Historical Society and an editor of the Jewish Encyclopedia. In 1908, he left the Smithsonian to take the post of President of Dropsie College.

Adler's unflagging energy saw him head a project to furnish a new authoritative translation of the Bible; he helped create the American Jewish Committee; and he became President of the Jewish Theological Seminary.

When Adler died in 1940, this tribute to his accomplishments was paid by President Franklin D. Roosevelt: "Scholar, patriot, humanitarian and religious leader... an earnest worker in the cause of peace and advocate of good will among men."

Judge Kills Self After Bias Charge

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — A judge who was accused of making an anti-Semitic remark from the bench shot himself to death in his chambers after a feud with the Jewish law firm involved.

The Jewish attorneys had launched an effort to have him disciplined, removed from the bench or forced to reform his court practices and actions to which they objected.

THE SUICIDE was County Judge John E. Krueger, a Catholic of German descent, whose main duties were in traffic court.

Sydney M. Eisenberg and his son, Alan, the attorneys, had feuded with the judge for many months. They had charged that his actions on the bench were bigoted, erratic and not in accord with good judicial practice.

Their complaints were put in writing to the administrator of state courts, who had passed them on to the state bar and the state supreme court, which supervises judges. No action had been taken on the complaints.

RECENTLY the feud reached a peak when an associate of the Eisenbergs reported that the judge had asked him in open court:

"Are you still working for that Jew on 11th St.?"

After the Eisenbergs complained that the remark was anti-Semitic, the judge said he had been misunderstood and had said, "Are you still working for that zoo on 11th St.?"

The Eisenbergs sponsored advertisements seeking information from persons who had complaints against the judge, and Alan Eisenberg told reporters that he "had something" on the judge and the latter would soon be removed from his post.

FRIENDS OF the judge said the feud threw him into a nervous frenzy and depressed him until he talked of suicide, expressing fear for his job.

In an attempt at solution of the problem, the judge read to reporters a list of suggested reforms for his court, and said he had appointed both Eisenbergs along with another attorney to review his court practices and make recommendations. The Eisenbergs immediately announced that they had written the judge's suggested reforms, but said they would serve on his committee anyway.

Shortly afterward, the judge locked himself into a washroom in his chambers and shot himself through the head.

THE DISTRICT attorney and the courts immediately announced that they would hold an investigation to determine whether any illegal pressures had been put on the judge.

Sympathizers of the dead judge flooded the Eisenbergs with anti-Semitic and obscene telephone calls and letters, accusing them of driving the judge to suicide. Unidentified persons also threw rocks through the windows of the firm's office, and also through the office windows of a relative, an attorney with the same last name.

TRUE GOY Is Qualification

BNEI BRAK — This all-Orthodox community which got the shock of its life when it discovered that its "shabbos goy," the person who performed jobs on the Sabbath that Jews are not permitted to do, was a Jew, now is considering a new Shabbos Goy.

However they have gone to great pains to determine that Ibn Abdul Kaser is in reality the Arab he claims he is. He wrote a letter to Mayor Israel Gottlieb, listing his qualifications as speaking Hebrew and Yiddish, but being a true Goy.

Marriage Licenses For Twins Help Up

HAIFA — Twin girls, 20, who arrived in Israel from Russia with their parents two years ago, have not been able to secure a marriage license although they applied several months ago and both are pregnant.

The mother remarried in a civil ceremony in Russia without securing a divorce from her first husband. On being released from a concentration camp she found that her first husband had since remarried, and she started a new life with her second husband.

Rabbinical authorities explained that the marriage licenses have not been refused, but are being held up pending further investigation.

Fire At Synagogue Not Anti-Semitism

WASHINGTON — A fire that ravaged Congregation Beth-El during the recent wave of rioting may have been the work of arsonists. The fact that it occurred on the first day of Passover has led some to believe that the motivation was anti-Semitism. The estimated damage was $25,000. The main sanctuary was saved through the strenuous efforts of the firefighters, Rabbi Samuel Scolnik told newsmen.

According to a report by a spokesman for the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, the burning of the synagogue was "completely isolated from the recent racial disorders." The ADL official said it was a case of vandalism and attempted burglary without any "anti-Semitic implications."

Price Paid Is High

Police Round Up Bus Station Gang

TEL AVIV — The price was high — too high — one death and 51 wounded.

But the triple bombing at the crowded Tel Aviv bus station, which took that toll, enabled Israeli police to capture a dangerous guerilla band which dared to place its bombs in crowded urban areas.

THE SAME gang had been responsible for the bombing of the Orient Restaurant in Jerusalem, which while not injuring anyone, might easily have taken many lives.

Quick work on the part of the police resulted in the rounding up of 19 members of the gang. Police indicated that the apprehension of the gang was made possible because the timing devices on the bombs allowed only a few minutes for them to escape, rather than the hours they had planned.

As in the case in the Jerusalem restaurant bombing, gangs of irate young Israelis roamed the Arab sections of Jaffa, creating havoc as they overturned cars, broke shop windows and otherwise rioted.

AS A RESULT of this spontaneous reaction, which has been roundly criticized by leading Israeli officials, as aiding the Arab cause, a program of education has been launched to insure the safety of the Arabs who have lived peacefully in Israel since the 1948 War of Liberation. Teachers will lecture children in schools and workers will be addressed in factories. The message will also be spread over the radio, in newspapers, and through synagogues.

The gang had not infiltrated Israel, but were West Bank Arabs who are in the part of Jordan Israel now occupied on the West Bank of the Jordan river. Heretofore the bombings have been considered the work of infiltrators.

AS A RESULT, four well-known Arab figures, including former Jordanian officials, were expelled from East Jerusalem — the former Jordanian sector of the city — and Hebron at dawn one day last week.

The three men and a woman were roused from their sleep, taken to the Allenby Bridge and sent to Jordan. They were accused of having initiated a campaign of incitement against Israeli authorities.

Commenting on the rioting by inflamed Israelis that followed the Tel Aviv bombing, The Jerusalem Post asserted that the rioting completed the work of the terrorists. "When there is an incident of the kind that has been caused in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv, the young people around who see the explosion and witness the injured falling, become acutely conscious of their position as a large and powerful majority, and take it upon themselves to wreak immediate revenge upon any Arab who happens to be in the neighborhood. It is unfair, indefensible and politically disastrous in the long run, even if it may be an obvious reaction and one that would occur in most places under such circumstances. Fortunately, up to now, the post-bomb rioting has not taken serious forms, but it may easily do so."

A POLICEMAN spotted one young man running from the Tel Aviv station moments after the first blast and caught him after a short chase. His description matched that given by some Israelis who had seen young men placing parcels in waste bins just before the explosions.

A key witness, the police said, was a vegetable seller near the terminal whose suspicions were aroused when four young men bought grapes but then discarded the grapes and kept the paper bags.

Sweet Holiday Recipe Ideas Are Continued

By SARAH LIEBER

We continue with our holiday recipe ideas. Sweet dishes are traditional for Rosh Hashonah,

Sarah

in great abundance and make and many of them are appropriate for Sukkot as well. At this season fall fruits and vegetables are coming into the markets our menu planning easier.

Holiday menus may be built around old family favorites, but the addition of a few novelties will always be welcome.

ROYAL SWEET POTATOES

1 cup dried apricots
1 cup brown sugar
2 pounds sweet potatoes, cooked and peeled
¼ cup parve margarine or fat
½ cup sliced, blanched almonds
Wash and soak apricots in 2 cups water for 2 hours.
Bring to a boil then cook over low heat until tender, about 20 minutes. Stir in sugar. Slice cooked sweet potatoes ½ inch thick. Arrange layers of sweet potato slices and apricots in a greased baking dish. Pour fat over top. Bake 30 to 35 minutes at 375 degrees. Sprinkle with almonds and brown for 10 minutes. Serve hot with chicken or roast. Serves 6 to 8.

CARROT AND APPLE TZIMMIS

4 cups grated raw carrots
1 tbs. fine barley
1 cup grated tart apples
3 tbs. fat or shortening
½ cup water
½ tsp. salt

2 tps. brown sugar
¼ tsp. nutmeg

Combine all ingredients in a saucepan. Cover and cook over lowest heat for 2 hours or until barley is soft. Shake the pot to prevent sticking. Add more water if needed. Serves 6.

GLAZED ONIONS

16 small white onions, peeled
6 tbs. parve margarine or shortening
¼ cup honey
Cook onions in boiling salted water to cover until tender, about 20 minutes. Drain and let stand a few minutes to dry. Melt parve margarine in pan and add honey. Blend well. Add cooked onions, a few at a time and cook over low heat until they are glazed and golden brown. Turn onions occasionally for an even color. Delicious with chicken, turkey or duck. Serves 4.

Cut acorn squash in halves lengthwise. Remove seeds. Parboil in salted water to cover for 15 minutes. Drain. Add sugar, salt and spices to diced apple and fill squash halves with the mixture. Drizzle oil or melted margarine over filling and cut surfaces of squash. Put 1 inch of water in the bottom of a shallow baking dish and arrange stuffed squash halves, cut side up in the dish. Bake 35 to 40 minutes at 350 degrees until squash is tender. Baste as needed with pan liquids. Very pretty to look at and delicious. Serves 4.

LEKACH DE LUXE

4 eggs
½ cup strong black coffee
1 cup sugar
1 cup honey

Add nuts, raisins and fruits to dry mixture and stir in. Blend well. Add brandy. Turn into well greased and paper lined pan 9 x 12 x 2 inches. Bake in preheated 325 degree oven and bake 1 hour. Invert to cool on rack. Cut into bars or squares. May be decorated if desired, using candied cherries and blanched almonds for a design.

What Others Think

By HELEN COHEN

I've tried, for a while, to submit material for this column regularly each week. However,

Helen

I told the editor, and I'm telling you, that I returned with the understanding that I would not necessarily be a weekly contributor. After all, I may not have something to say each week. Writing over a 20 year period, in all fairness, should have long since given me the opportunity to express my thoughts pretty thoroughly.

And besides, now that summer is over, life just may get a bit hectic around here, if I continue to substitute teach and/or work on my degree and teaching license at the university.

AND THAT brings me to how it feels to go back to school after a lapse of 30 years.

Going back to teaching I found rather routine. Once a teacher, always a teacher. But to go back to learning, well, that took some discipline, at first, to apply oneself, to concentrate on difficult or tedious assignments. No light summer reading, these courses I've been taking. But certainly a challenge to a grandma who thought her school days were long over.

I'm really learning a lot. And after taking two courses in the usual manner, by attending classes, I decided this year to try a correspondence course.

WELL, THIS was something else. Here I'm completely on my own. Either I sit down and get it done, by myself, or I'll never finish.

No classes to sit through, no schedule for tests or final exams. All on my own. And I nearly let it lick me. There were weeks and months when I put off — too busy, forgot, other things on my mind, lazy, tired — but I rallied and now I am on assignment 18, out of a total of 25, besides having taken my mid-term exam.

AND THAT brings me to assignment 16. The course is on children's literature, and assignment 16 takes up the section in the text on sacred writings. In the introduction to the selections we are apprised of the reasons why young people should study the Bible (they include the New Testament, of course) and other religious writings 'as literature.' Thought you might find these reasons presented in the text worth considering:

(1) The Bible is great literature, unsurpassed for its drama of human life, vitality of thought and enduring wisdom.
(2) Its English translation (they refer to the King James version) is unrivalled in its matchless simplicity, clarity, rhythmic flow of words, beauty of diction, felicity of phrase.

(3) The Bible contains as many types of literature as found in any national literature: narrative, history, biography, philosophy, prophecy, essay, oration and many kinds of poetry. Its stories, such as the one about Joseph, have been called 'epic gems.'

(4) Folklore found in the Bible include fables, legends, ancient songs, proverbs, romances, sagas, and hero tales, including such 'heroes' as Abraham and Moses.

(5) Together with the literature of Greece and Rome, the Old Testament has been the main factor in the development of our modern prose and poetry. (Prof. R.G. Moulton is credited with this appraisal.)

(6) The language, episodes and personages of the Bible are so interwoven with our speech and books that our children cannot afford (says Laura B. Richards) to be ignorant of it — we say, for instance, that a man earns his living 'by the sweat of his brow,' that he is 'the salt of the earth.'

THAT BOOK that we're the People of — sounds like it was well worth holding on to.

The Best Of A Bad Situation

Just the fear we expressed here in our first editorial on the Hatchett case has eventuated. Everyone seems to want to get into the act and now a petition is being circulated seeking Hatchett's removal.

We called then for a united position, if at all possible, with the collective brains of the public relations agencies in the Jewish community applied not only to this one case, but to those which are almost bound to follow.

This is a matter of a confrontation between the Negro demands and the rights of others, and in his instance the others are Jews who have a right to the protection of Jewish agencies.

What has happened is that Arthur Goldberg took a position, evidently without consulting any of the Jewish agencies, and he was disavowed promptly even by the agency which had already selected him to be its president — The American Jewish Committee. The Synagogue Council of America, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, the American Jewish Congress, the Jewish War Veterans of America and Albert Vorspan, of the Reform Movement, have all by this time taken a position against either Mr. Hatchett or President Hester of New York University or both.

There are several aspects of the situation which deserve further analysis.

One is the fact that President Hester — and we should take his word for it — was not aware of Mr. Hatchett's anti-Semitic stand at the time of the appointment. This of course indicates poor administration on the university's part, since President Hester stated publicly that before the appointment was announced a thorough examination of the candidate was made.

It all seems to add up to the fact, when we consider that President Hester has seemingly put his foot into it every time he has opened his mouth, that he is not too alert and aware when it comes to anti-Semitism in particular and public relations in general.

But although President Hester did not know about Mr. Hatchett's record, it is clear that the Black students of NYU who recommended him and only him did know everything about him. This is significant, because it means that this was a purposeful move aimed at an open confrontation by these students who could not doubt that Mr. Hatchett's appointment would be an affront to the Jewish community.

Another point to be considered is that the presidents of the various student organizations at the University, the majority of whom from their names are Jewish, have unanimously accepted Mr. Hatchett's appointment, and not asked the administration to reconsider. This of course on the part of these Jewish student leaders is either a case of bad communications within the Jewish community, open challenge of their peers in the Jewish community, or even an unwillingness to fight for an issue involving Jewish rights. Mr. Goldberg was astute enough to call the facts as they were, but the statement of the student leaders was almost a whitewash.

Mr. Hatchett would make it easier for the university who is employing him in this innovative post even at this late date if he would acknowledge that the Jewish community has a legitimate grievance against him, but he seems not willing to do so.

It seems to us that there is no other recourse at this point for the Jewish community — having voiced its resentment — than to accept a bad situation, which of course was Mr. Goldberg's position in the first instance. Our quarrel with him was for acting unilaterally, even though he was called on by the university, but his decision may have been the wisest.

We do not state that the Jewish protests have been in error. We would be the last publication on earth to suggest that Jews not protest openly when an issue is at stake. The protests have served a purpose, and what is needed now are statesmanship and unified action.

This was our first call — for the ablest people in the Jewish community to confront the issue of Negro incursions on Jewish rights, and come to some conclusions and a program which will serve best the Jewish and the general community and all its citizens, regardless of race or creed.

The EDITOR'S CHAIR

Both Presidential candidates will need a program for peace in Vietnam, and we urge upon either or both the program we first enunciated here over a year ago.

Our plan has the value of gaining support from world public opinion, which even though the Communist world seems to ignore when it suits them, still plays a role in their thinking. Under our plan, instead of as at present in the Paris talks asking Vietnam for a response to an act of our own, the United States and her allies would lay out a long-range program which will ultimately take the United States out of Vietnam step by step.

First of course would be the end of bombing of North Vietnam. Then the withdrawal of some of our troops, then the next step and the next and the next. These steps would be implemented regardless of the response of North Vietnam. It might even be that there would be no response from North Vietnam if two or three of our steps were implemented. But finally world public opinion — and of course the united position of the people of the United States — would bring a suitable reaction from the Communists, and we would be on the road to an honorable peace in Southeast Asia.

Of course there is a gamble here. The risks are considerable. But no important goal can be underwritten against mischance like an insurance policy.

Our plan takes care of the ancillary needs of the United States, which is to restore faith in the Administration, restore peace within our own borders, and permit us to go about taking care of the urban crisis with our full resources.

This program is worth considering.

Rabbi Jules Harlow has sent us a copy of "Yearnings," which he describes in his letter, which we are reprinting below. We are sure that anyone who wishes a copy of the prayers can purchase one — there is no printed price on the pamphlet — from the Rabbinical Assembly for a modest fee by writing to them at the address on Rabbi Harlow's letter.

We do not believe that revision of prayers is much of an answer to the needs of the present generation, but this certainly is in the best Jewish tradition, and of course the Orthodox siddur and mahzor is made up of outstanding prayers brought into the service as they were composed and filled a need. Rabbi Ben Kahn, who has savlanut when it comes to his relation with us (look up the Hebrew word if you aren't familiar with it) because every once in a while when we are frustrated with the Jewish community for its opaqueness to the needs of the Jewish young we take it out on his Hillel Foundations, sent us a group of Hillel publications, one of which everyone concerned with Jewish campus life ought to read. It's entitled "New Frontiers For Jewish Life on The Campus" and is made up of papers delivered at the International Conference of Hillel Directors last year. One paper in particular deserves wide circulation. It is by Rabbi Albert Axelrad, Hillel Director at Brandeis University.

We had some correspondence with him when he was selected for the position. We don't recall who it was that brought us together. But we were told that he had a lot on the ball and was not afraid to experiment.

In any event, he seems to have put into practice many of his ideas, and his experience on the Brandeis campus is incorporated into the paper he prepared for the booklet. We don't want to steal the thunder of whomever we arrange to review the book, but here is what Rabbi Axelrad has to say on the matter of prayer in this day:

"Many of our best young people stay away from the synagogue because the prayer book (including the Reconstructionist Prayer Book) is unacceptable to them intellectually. They search for ways to be religious in a non-formal way, freed from the traditional structure and content of our prayer books. This is a radically new situation in which we find ourselves. For many marginal but serious Jews, we have entered into the 'post-prayer age.' As it took a cataclysm — the destruction of the Temple — to end the age of sacrifice, so it has taken the incomparably heinous tragedy of Auschwitz to end the age of conventional prayer in Judaism. We would deceive ourselves if we refused to acknowledge this possibility. I personally believe in God and consider talk of His 'death' to be premature, meaningless in general, blasphemous, and irrelevant to me as a Jew. Nevertheless, the age of conventional prayer may be passed in Judaism. Even within the ranks of the synagogue many, I believe, have come to share this feeling of the meaninglessness of prayer, as we know it."

Here is Rabbi Harlow's letter:

Dear Gabe,

I am enclosing a booklet which may be of interest to you. It is experimental in nature, and is intended for use in our congregations as a supplement during High Holy Day services. The way it is used will be determined by the rabbi of each congregation. Some of the passages are suitable for responsive or unison reading; others are intended to be read by the individual as he pleases.

"Yearnings" has met with a favorable reception among members of the Rabbinical Assembly, who have been ordering it for use in their congregations. The first printing of 50,000 has been exhausted and another printing has been ordered.

You may remember that at our last convention one of our sessions was on experiments in liturgy. This is one of a series of projected publications, some soft bound and experimental, some hard bound and more comprehensive. We are trying in a variety of ways to help make the services in our congregations more apparently related to the lives and the concerns of our congregants. No publication can be a perfect answer. But it is a start, a direction, and we plan to be guided by the response, or lack of it, to what we produce.

The sources are listed on page 32.

The prayer on behalf of Soviet Jewry (p. 7, YEKUM PURKAN) reflects a current concern. Response to life in the real world should be found not only in sermons and lectures, but in the synagogue service. The passage parallels in style the prayer in traditional siddurim on behalf of leaders of the Babylonian Jewish community.

Pages 12-13 contain a reading reflecting upon the spiritual significance of Jerusalem, always and now. A reading reflecting upon peace and violence, and Vietnam and Biafra and poverty in our land may be found on P. 4 and on P. 13. The latter uses the theme of the akedah, applying it today.

The parable by Walt Alston is an attempt to create parables in language and terms easily understood today, when kings and princes and subjects (figures in medieval parables) do not figure in our lives. If the parable is not clearly understood, the lesson it teaches certainly will not be.

Pages 21-23, and also 24-25, contain an adaptation of the traditional al chet. The intention is not to replace the traditional text, but rather to supplement it by confronting ourselves with a catalogue of specifics from our contemporary experience.

Soma Morgenstern (p. 27) and Charles Reznikoff (p. 30) are alive and well in New York.

On the source page of the enclosed copy I have identified in ink the communities of the contributors who are rabbis with pulpits.

Should you have any questions, I am at your service.

With an early wish for a happy and a fruitful new year.

All In The Village Had Tattoos On Their Arms

By M. Z. FRANK

There is a village in the Lachish Region inhabited entirely by survivors of the European death camps. Each person we saw there has a tattooed number on his or her arm. There are sixty families living there, dairy and chicken farmers. Here and there someone plants a few vegetables and fruit trees in the yard. The name of the village — or moshav — is Kfar Ahim, meaning The Village of the Brothers.

Frank The village is named after the two Guber brothers, Ephraim and Zvi, who fell in the War of Liberation. Their parents, Mordecai and Rivkah Guber, spent thirteen years in Nehora, also in the Lachish Region, Mordecai as chairman of the Council, Rivkah as principal of a school and a librarian. Besides founding libraries all over the Lachish region and supervising their work she also founded a rest home for Hebrew writers in order to emphasize to the children of backward Asian and African parents the importance of Hebrew literature.

Now Mordecai has retired as chairman of the Council and the couple went to live in a village named after their two sons. Incidentally, Rivkah Guber published two books which have been translated into English: "Signal Fires of Lachish" (now about to come out in its fourth edition) and "Two Brothers."

WE WENT TO see the Gubers in their new place. Mordecai found himself something to do: planting shade trees, small parks, building cultural centers, beautifying the synagogue, etc. In Kfar Ahim every farmer has developed a very nice farm of his own but the public domain has been neglected. So Mordecai has gotten himself busy with the public domain.

Where does the money come from? Partly it is "deficit financing" in which every Israeli public official worth his salt is experienced — and Mordecai Guber has been a good executive — partly ingenuity. For instance, the village has several people who have to be employed at "emergency labor," which is a disguised form of dole in Israel. They get paid by the Ministry of Welfare one way or the other. So Mordecai put them to work on his pet projects and even inspired them with a genuine desire to do a job. "You see these saplings?" Rivkah asked me as we were walking along the pavement. "Come back three years from now and they will give you shade." Note: the Gubers moved into the village in January 1968. "You see these thorns and brambles? There are very few of them left now. When we came here, every unused plot of ground was full of them. Look at the park we are planting now." And so on and so on.

AS FOR RIVKAH herself, she told me she was planning a new book, which will take her a couple of years to prepare: the life history of each of the sixty families in the village. We visited a couple of them.

There is M., who, when salvaged from the death camp, was emaciated and too sick to travel. She was sent to Sweden to recuperate. From there she got on one of the unnavigable tubs on which Jews tried to break the British blockade. The captain of the "ship," so called, was a spy fair-haired short-statured young man by the name of "Arthur." The passengers never knew his real name. Arthur was impressed by the beauty of the sickly girl, but not by her chances of survival. He expected any minute he would have to throw her body into the sea. But she survived and became not only a mother but a grandmother too. Her husband works in Tel Aviv as the representative of the village in the Agricultural Center. Her oldest son is in the parachuters' troop — he won distinction in the Six Day War.

YEARS PASSED since M. saw "Arthur" on the ship. Arthur, meantime, served in the Israeli army, in the Jewish Agency and in the Israeli government. He set up the Lachish Region (but never ran into M.) He set up Arad, he headed a team of workers sent to Iran to rebuild an area destroyed by an earthquake; he served for three and a half years as First Secretary in the Israeli Embassy in Moscow (and published his experiences in Hebrew and lately in English — "Between the Hammer and the Sickle" — Jewish Publication Society). He served as Deputy Minister of Trade and Commerce and quit. Now he is Deputy Minister of Absorption. His name is Aryeh Eliav, known to his friends as "Lyova."

Lyova told me when I saw him that he had been to visit the Gubers in Kfar Ahim and that I ought to do the same. But he did not tell me that when he and M. recognized each other, they fell on each other's necks. M. did not know that the Lyova Eliav she had read about was her captain Arthur of twenty years ago. Lyova did not know what had become of that beautiful girl on his ship whom he did not expect to survive the voyage.

SEVERAL YEARS ago, when Lyova returned from his term of service in Russia, we met at a cafe in Tel Aviv. He told me American tourists in Russia told him about the book "Exodus" and made him read it. He did not like it. "Look at me," he said, "do I look like Ari Ben-Canaan?"

He does not. Lyova does not look like a dashing hero. Not a character to be played by Paul Newman. But his achievements were heroic. It was a heroic period.

I don't know how many of Lyova's passengers on that ship besides M. live in Kfar Ahim. But they are all survivors of the death camps who bear tattooed numbers on their forearms — tattooed by the Nazis and treated worse than cattle. Today the ones I saw are contented and fairly prosperous farmers. "You can teach a Jew anything" one handsome housewife told me. "Just give him a hoe and a plough, he'll learn how to be a farmer." Or a soldier like her son.

THEY ARE ALL Europeans in Kfar Ahim. The ones I met come from the Danube Basin and from Czechoslovakia.

In the villages where the Gubers lived until January 1968, the children had to be encouraged to read and study by Rivkah Guber. In Kfar Ahim it is taken for granted at the home. Real cultured people who made good farmers. And yet, they had no parks, no playground, and no shade trees until the Gubers moved in and Mordecai got busy.

Bitter Verbal Clash

Negro, Jewish Youth In Confrontation

STARLIGHT, PA. — A confrontation that their fathers who are supposed to be experts in the field of human relations have still avoided took place here when Jewish and Negro teenagers exchanged sharp verbal blows at an overnight human relations encampment sponsored by the B'nai B'rith Youth Organization.

The Jewish young people, made up of Aleph Zadek Aleph and B'nai B'rith Girls delegations from all over the United States, learned how young Black people look at Jews in particular and whites in general.

IT WAS A LESSON the Jewish youngsters will not soon forget.

The encounter between Jewish and Negro teenagers produced "a measure of mutual understanding, and at least a few scars," in the opinion of Jerry Diggs, an official of the Camden, N.J. branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

In spite of ruffled tempers and shouting discord, both groups joined in moving tribute to the late Rev. Martin Luther King, whose name was enshrined on a plaque at the camp's Memorial Grove, in a ceremony dedicated to equality of races through peaceful progress.

MR. DIGGS LED a group of 34 Negro boys and girls who had been invited to the international conventions of two components of the B'nai B'rith Youth Organization. The visitors were members of the NAACP, Congress of Racial Equality, Black Power Militant Union and the Young Men's Christian Association of the Philadelphia-Camden area.

Interracial athletics and arts and crafts programs were followed by intense and often bitter discussion, particularly over the problem of urban violence. The Jewish young people, many of them sons and daughters of merchants whose businesses had been destroyed or damaged in recent riots, sharply attacked black "anti-social behavior" — with often equally acrimonious responses from the Negro group.

At times, the discussion seemed ready to break up in angry disagreement. However, a "task force" composed of six white members of AZA and six black young men, climaxed the program with a report that helped to assuage some of the wounded feelings of both groups.

THE CONSENSUAL report stated, in effect, that any white person who sincerely wants to help black people today must do so "anonymously." Negroes, the young people agreed, after centuries of oppression, are deeply resentful of the "great white father" role supposedly assumed by some would-be benefactors.

Another conclusion was that integration is no longer a top priority objective of Negro aspirations. "If it comes, fine," the report stated, "But the main issue now is full equality, decent housing, adequate educational facilities and equal justice."

The "task force" also took on the generation gap, when it was agreed that white youth cannot be held responsible for the oppression of the Negroes for 350 years; nor, could today's white young people be blamed for anti-Negro attitudes of their parents.

THE NEGRO'S quest for "self-pride," his effort to foster appreciation for black contributions to American and world civilization was applauded in the report, which compared current emphasis on this aspect of Negro life with concern for the teaching of Jewish history and values to Jewish young people.

Concerning urban riots, the report insisted that the root cause was injustice and discrimination practiced against black people in white society as a whole, and that they would end with the ending of poverty and anti-Negro oppression.

Election of black congressmen and officials at every level was described as a major deterrent to further ghetto violence.

Distrust by whites toward blacks and blacks toward whites, the report concluded, is a tragic fact of contemporary life that cannot be blinked away by oratory and expressions of lofty sentiment. It will continue, the "task force" added, until each group is convinced — by the actions of the other, that "you mean what you say." Toward this end, the participants agreed to go back into their own communities to further the cause of humanity and justice.

17 PER CENT IN ISRAEL

A total of 17 per cent of world Jewry was resident in Israel in 1966, as against ½ per cent in 1900 and 5.7 per cent in 1948.

Approach To Communication With Members

By MYRON SCHOEN

A little over a year ago the Commission on Synagogue Administration of the Union of

of Temple Administrators, Congregations seemed to be

American Hebrew Congregations published, in conjunction with the Research Studies Committee of the National Association

a significant study on how the congregations within the Reform fold go about making contact with its membership. It was titled "Communications and Public Relations Practices in our Temples" and there was an excellent analysis of the statistics and interpretation of the problems in this area by Julian Feldman, F.T.A., of Washington (D.C.) Hebrew Congregation and now president of NATA.

The picture then was a mixed one, part good but mostly bad. Congregations seemed to be stuck in a rut, frequently using outdated approaches and quite unclear about their objectives.

WHILE I CANNOT attribute it directly to Mr. Feldman's incisive analysis and suggestions in Research Survey No. 9, there seems to be a movement towards improving the situation. I've noted a number of congregations that have revamped their bulletins and have begun to take advantage of the technological changes that are available now at minor cost. More important, there seems to be a greater awareness of the failure to communicate.

Just a few months ago I learned of the effort of one congregation to improve the lines of communication with its large membership and I think it is worthy of comment. The word came from my colleague, Joseph W. Boston, executive director of Temple Israel in Memphis, Tenn. He advised me that the temple's Public Relations Committee would make a serious attempt to acquaint its membership with "the planning, and execution of decisions reached all along the broad spectrum of Temple Israel's administrative activities." To accomplish this end they would put out a quarterly publication called The Sounding Board, which they would term "an interim report from the temple board to its members."

THE FIRST issue of the quarterly came out this summer and I judge it to be off to a good start. It is attractively made up and easy to read. It consists of four divisions. First is a capsule explanation of the temple's budget which will go into effect on Sept. 1. My only criticism of this aspect is that it fails to highlight how the funds expended move the machinery and the program of the congregation. This is followed with an excellent idea, a "Question Box," in which such questions as "Does the Board ever discuss long range program for the Temple?" are posed. An important subject and worthy of more than the brief answer given. . . probably worth an entire issue in itself.

In addition to an interesting section devoted to "Highlights of Recent Committee Reports," there is a challenging section devoted to a "Proposed New Leadership Structure." The president of the congregation, Julian Allenberg, has suggested (Continued on next page)

SUKKOT A Programmed Text

by

DR. J. LEONARD AZNEER

Rabbi: Temple Anshe Emeth
Associate Professor of Philosophy of Education
Youngstown University, Youngstown, Ohio

"Programmed instruction" is a new method of self-pacing learning which enables the student to proceed at his own rate of speed. Tested and approved by outstanding psychologists and pedagogues, Dr. Azneer's book brings a new concept in teaching and learning. Because of the ease with which material is assimilated, the learner is motivated in wanting to complete the learning process.

If used properly, it will reduce the time and effort that a teacher must invest in teaching basic material.

Profusely illustrated and beautifully printed, Dr. Azneer brings this new method into the Jewish classroom.

In The Footsteps of Dick Savitt

Tom Okker, 24, is the first Jew to approach the greatness of Richard Savitt, who led the United States tennis world and reached the heights of Wimbledon championship a few decades ago. Okker, from The Netherlands, almost eked out the coveted United States open championships at Forest Hills this week. His victory over aging Pancho Gonzales to enter the quarter finals marked Okker as a leading world player, and probably will lead to his entry into the professional ranks. He has been offered $45,000 a year. Okker went on to reach the finals by downing Australia's Ken Rosewall 8-6, 6-4, 6-8, 6-1. Rosewall was seeded third and Okker eighth.

Fortas And Anti-Semitism

Even President Johnson is not unaware of the possibilities of winning the nomination for Abe Fortas as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court by using anti-Semitism as a lever, New York Times reporter Sidney E. Zion asserted, following the President's Friday press conference. Johnson recalled the 1916 fight for the confirmation of Justice Louis D. Brandeis, declaring that "we had a somewhat similar situation" then. The opposition to Brandeis was "tinged with anti-Semitism," Zion reported and "if the same can be laid to the Fortas case it must embarrass Nixon and could perhaps even lead him to switch from public neutrality to private support for the justice."

Ida For Israel

Will Ida Kaminska, the former head of the Warsaw Yiddish Theatre, live in Israel or in the United States? Reports seem to conflict. In Vienna, where she rested for a few weeks with her husband, her daughter and her granddaughter and her husband, the world-famous actress told reporters she intended to go to Israel and would make it her main home and center of activities.

The Major And The King

One of those notions that occur on the spur of the moment hit a major in the Israeli army when he spied King Hussein among the shoppers in a store in London. Baruch Kaparovski, whose civilian position is a vice-principal of a high school, was leading a group of members of the Israel Labor movement on a European tour. He went up to the king and addressed him in Arabic: "Your majesty, King Hussein." The king shook hands with Mr. Kaparovski who by then, had added, "I am from Israel. What about peace in the Middle East?" The king gave as good as he got. "In Sha-Allah — God Willing," and then beat a hasty retreat.

Amazing Fund-Raiser

In an interview in the New York Times on the occasion of his having turned over the reins of Brandeis University to his successor, Morris Abram, Dr. Abram Leon Sachar revealed the fabulous story of his $200 million fund-raising achievement from 1948, the school's beginning, to today. The campus, now encompassing 200 acres on the Charles River at Waltham, boasts 65 major installations representing more than $60 million. An additional $140 million has been contributed for operating expenses and endowments. Dr. Sachar said he is working on a book on David K. Niles, the first chairman of the board of the institution, who was one of President Roosevelt's chief advisors. He added that he also has plans for a book on Louis D. Brandeis, after whom the school was named.

Dayan Most Popular

Moshe Dayan has a clear road to the premiership if nothing untoward happens between now and the Israel elections in 1969. This was made clear by a poll which showed the Defense Minister far outdistancing his nearest opponent, Deputy Prime Minister Yigal Allon, as the choice for the top post if Mr. Eshkol should step down. Dayan secured 46 per cent as against only 13 for Allon. Eban was third with 7, followed by Menahem Begin with 4. The poll was conducted for The Jewish Chronicle of London by Public Opinion Research of Israel.

Watch His Step

There was no indication that the clock presented to Morris B. Abram, retiring president of the American Jewish Committee, who will be inducted early in October as Brandeis University's second president, should watch his step. To Mr. Abram's left is his successor as American Jewish Committee president, former United States Representative to the United Nations, Arthur Goldberg. Making the presentation on behalf of the Committee, is past president Irving M. Engel.

...What could be a landmark case was the discharge of 24-year-old Coast Guardman Henry R. Mandel, a seaman, who had enlisted two years ago although he was not subject to the draft. He told a Federal Court that "my formal religious training in Jewish religious schools for eight years exposed me to the concept of the inviolability of life as an abstract concept." During basic training he was permitted to skip rifle practice because it conflicts with his beliefs. Appointment of Kenyon C. Burke by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith as a community relations specialist is the first Negro to be named as a director to the staff of any Jewish organization.

Voice In The Wilderness

Like a voice calling in the wilderness, Rabbi Louis Finkelstein, chancellor of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, has suggested a world synagogue council representing all shades of religious opinion and able to speak in the name of religious Jewry as a whole. Speaking in the city where Liberal Judaism and Orthodox are in a continual state of controversy, Dr. Finkelstein, told a reporter for The Jewish Chronicle of London that in the United States there already existed a synagogue council in which all groupings in American Judaism were represented. He also pointed to the New York Board of Rabbis, which also includes rabbis of all three wings of Judaism. He did not mention the substantial wing of Orthodox Judaism which refuses to be a part of any organization in which non-Orthodox rabbis are members.

Approach To Communication

(Continued from preceding pg.) upon the feeling of involvement. Hence, while The Sounding Board has as its major goal keeping the members informed, it would be wise to turn to the other side of the coin and give the members an opportunity to inform the leadership of its feelings and reactions to the administrative decisions and the program of the congregation. As the word "communication" infers, there should always be a path to and from the one you are communicating with.

MILTON SIMON, chairman of the congregation's Public Relations Committee truly deserves the praise given to him for this initial effort. He probably won't find it easy to maintain the high standards he has set and I would make a suggestion. Keep in mind that the success of all group endeavors is highly dependent

Your Son Has Gone To Prison A Great Man

LOS ANGELES (P-O) — "Your son has gone into prison a great man, and he will come out even a greater man."

These were the words of Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel, leading peace advocate, to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Maizlish, active workers in the Jewish community, whose son Joseph I. Maizlish is serving a three-year sentence for refusing to cooperate with the draft.

PUBLICATION of a statement by five members of the faculty of the University of California here brought the case to public attention.

Young Maizlish was a teacher's assistant in the department of history at the university, working towards his doctorate.

In the statement, the faculty members asserted that:

"The selfless gesture of citizens like Joseph Maizlish will make it easier for us Americans to right this dismal wrong. We pledge Joseph Maizlish our personal and professional support in facilitating his return to productive academic life upon his release from prison."

THE GRADUATE student explained that "Since I turned in my draft card, I have not been concerned with avoiding prosecution or conviction. My concern has been to conduct my life according to the principle of brotherhood of all men. I did not wish special privileges from the Selective Service System whether of student or conscientious objector status. I could not ask the Board to be a judge of my conscience, nor could I ask it to determine how I should serve my fellow man, even in a way not immediately associated with the military . . ."

Mrs. Maizlish, who is a lifelong member of Hadassah, does reviewing for The California Jewish Voice, local Jewish weekly. Mr. Maizlish is the former owner of the Warner Brothers TV Station here, and was active in the founding of the University of Judaism, West Coast affiliate of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America.

Rabbis Concerned By Negro Demands

NEW YORK — Increased concern over the rights of Jewish teachers in the face of mounting Negro pressures found expression at the last meeting of the board of governors of the New York Board of Rabbis.

Rabbi Seymour Siegel told The POST and OPINION that the two predominant issues discussed at the meeting were the appointment of John Hatchett as head of the Afro-American Student Institute at New York University, and the peril in which the status of Jewish teachers is put by the decentralization of the New York school system.

"THERE IS A growing hostility to the rights of others that plainly calls for action," the Professor of Theology at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America said. He described the attitude at the board meeting as a new militancy . . . to aid the Jews in general and the Jewish teachers in particular."

Rabbi Gilbert Klapperman, president of the board, declined to discuss the meeting, but said he would characterize the mood as "an increased sensitivity on the part of the Jewish community rather than as a more militant one."

It was learned by The P-O that an advertisement deploring NYU's retention of Mr. Hatchett in the face of his refusal to retract anti-Semitic and bigoted statements is being planned for the New York Times. It will be sponsored by the board and other Jewish organizations.

THE P-O also learned that the board has sent messages to Albert Shanker, head of the United Teachers Federation promising support for his group's defense of the legitimate rights of its teachers. The rabbinical board has been opposed to decentralization on the grounds that it would destroy the merit system and rob the teachers of basic rights. The refusal of the Ocean Hill Brownsville school board to reinstate 10 teachers after they were cleared of all charges by an arbitrator, Negro Judge Francis Rivers, has strengthened the position of the board of rabbis.

Rabbi Siegel told The POST and OPINION that there is great concern that the rights of the teachers, the majority of whom are Jewish, will be bartered away on the grounds of "easing tensions" in the community.

THE ANTI-DEFAMATION League of B'nai B'rith has taken the position that it supports the concept of decentralization provided safeguards are built in to insure quality education for all the school children of the city. It calls one such safeguard "merit competitive examination."

At a public hearing on the decentralization plan by the New York City Board of Education, Dr. Herman Mantel, president of the Jewish Teachers Association, protested distribution of a pamphlet by a Black Power group, which charged that American Jews were sending money to Israel which could be of better benefit to Negroes. Dr. Mantel's protest was met by a torrent of abuse from Negro militants who shouted him down. He was forced to leave the hearing to the accompaniment of cries by the hecklers.

Meanwhile a campaign to secure 100,000 signatures to a protest petition against Mr. Hatchett's appointment has been launched by the Far Rockaway (N.Y.) Jewish Community Council. Announcement was made that the drive would be expanded nationwide.

Average Jew Unconcerned With Progress of Negro

By HYMAN CHESTER

MILWAUKEE, WIS. — Jewish apathy is the frustrating, ever present factor which clouds the future of Jewish - Negro relationships as the Negro fights for his place in the sun.

Lauer

This is the conclusion that a rabbinical student, Lawrence Lauer, reached in his 10-week study of the poor in Milwaukee's inner city. Lauer served as an "intern" for the summer — liaison of the Jewish community with the inner city poor.

IT WAS part of a nationwide program inaugurated by the Hebrew Union College — Jewish Institute of Religion, but only four cities, Milwaukee among them, accepted the students for the work.

In Milwaukee the Milwaukee Jewish Council, and Reform Temples Shalom and Emanu-El B'nai Jeshurun paid the student's salary. A third Reform temple, Sinai, refused, but some of its officers made contributions to help.

Lauer, a recent bridegroom, spent his honeymoon with his wife living in the Milwaukee central city, surrounded by a heavily Negro population.

HE ATTENDED meetings constantly, going wherever Negro organizations got together; entering wherever he would be admitted, listening to the leaders carrying their problems to the "establishment," or carrying the results of their meetings to their people.

Mostly he played an inactive role, seeking to observe and learn — to act as the eyes and ears of the Jewish community.

He made his observations in a series of reports to the council, which will study them and release them later with recommendations to the community.

LAUER said he felt sure that Milwaukee's problems of Negro-Jewish or Negro-white relationships were comparatively small when compared to those of larger metropolitan centers. Milwaukee's Negro population is estimated now at no more than 12 per cent of the total city population, after a growth which has lagged behind that of many other major cities.

Here, however, he reinforced his previous idea that so-called Negro anti-Semitism is basically only an anti-white attitude rather than something specifically against the Jew. Lauer could not find that the Negro differentiated between white men in most instances, although there were some who made an impression on the blacks as Jewish.

The traditional role of Jewish civil rights organizations in bringing help to the Negro has made little or no impression on either Negro or Jew, Lauer said.

HE COULD find no ordinary Jewish citizens who seemed to care whether the Negro made progress or not. The community remains uncommitted, apart, unknowing and uninvolved, he said.

This fact alone, he warned, will help to increase the gap between the Jewish community and Jewish youth, because today's educated Jewish youth is increasingly non-religious and committed to aid the poor and the black.

In only a few instances did he have occasion to approach Jewish merchants or citizens directly in the inner city, seeking help for the Negro.

IN ONE attempt, he said he tried to get some merchants to invest idle funds in a Negro credit union formed to aid the poor. The merchants would not deposit funds because little or no interest was promised on savings for the time being, Lauer said, and he could convince no one that the effort would be good for the community.

One merchant bragged of his good relationships with Negroes, but Lauer noticed that he had surrounded his store and its entrances with the latest protection devices. Lauer felt that this advertised mistrust of the residents.

The ordinary Jewish citizen had a shoulder shrugging attitude toward Lauer's mission. Jewish "leaders," however, were interested and encouraging.

LAUER SAID he felt that any Jewish community which could afford it should have a rabbi, or other community specialist, directing its relationships with the city's poor. One of his recommendations is that Milwaukee channel all aid that it can through one central source, and act with one voice in making the best commitment it can.

As for himself, Lauer plans to stay out of school this coming year and work for the Indianapolis Hebrew Congregation, as a Hebrew teacher and in other tasks.

He will be studying himself for the time being. He is somewhat discouraged about a future as a rabbi. With the years, he says, he has grown more doubtful that the Jewish community really listens to its rabbis. He wants more than a good job with no influence upon the Jewish community. He wants to be sure that his own commitment can bring satisfaction and results.

Algerian Incident Closed, But Not Israel Arguments

JERUSALEM — The Israel Government got its hijacked El Al jet back, along with the 12 remaining passengers, all Israelis, who had been held for almost a month by Algeria, but it also got itself embroiled into an argument over whether the 12 Arab infiltrators who had been released as a "humanitarian gesture" was not in effect paying ransom.

THE ARGUMENT narrowed itself down as to whether the release of the 12 Arabs might not have been inducement to other hijackings by Arab terrorists.

Abba Eban, Foreign Minister, came under attack because he had sought to credit the release of the men to the delicate diplomatic maneuvering of his department through the Italian authorities. The real reason for the release seemed clear enough — the threat of a boycott of Algeria by the international air line pilots and other laboring bodies.

THE JERUSALEM POST editorially chastised the Administration for its attempt to disguise the reason for the release.

"The Israeli public has been tempered by 20 years of war, siege and hardship. But it is also given to rumor mongering. Yet, this public can be relied upon to take this kind of a deal with understanding and to appreciate the need for such a deal if it is properly informed. The release of 16 sentenced terrorists does not change if it is called 'a humanitarian gesture.' The passion for secret diplomacy does not always pay."

Dilemma For Hospital Authorities

Jewish Blood For Fateh

CHICAGO — The moral question which faced Hadassah Hospital authorities when wounded

Mrs. Schenk The convention elected Mrs. Max Schenk, wife of the New York rabbi, as its president.

Dr. Kalman Mann, director of the Hospital, asserted that "We were faced with an agonizing problem — is it right to give blood donated by our people for our people to enemies who have sworn to destroy us?"

HE ANSWERED his own question:

"We were guided by the high motives of our own upbringing by the Bible. And we treated them in exactly the same way that we treated our own."

The same decision was reached earlier in the case of the Arab soldiers who were wounded in the Six Day War.

"We treated 60 Arab soldiers during the Six-Day War," he said. "They were hospitalized and treated in exactly the same way as our people. The only difference was that there was a guard at their door."

HE TOLD OF the amazement of Red Cross representatives who came to investigate. They had been told that the Arab wounded were being kept in the basement on the floor without beds.

In an interview Mrs. Schenk repeated the Hadassah approach to aliyah from America to Israel.

She said she believed that young American Jews should go to Israel to live and to give the Jewish State the benefit of their American education, especially in the vitally-needed technological areas. But, she pointed out, the American Jews must want to go to Israel — "they should be motivated to go and the decision should be entirely theirs."

Mrs. Schenk said she sees Hadassah in the late 60's and 70's playing a more active role in America. There is need for Hadassah to strengthen its American Affairs Program, "to stimulate the deeper understanding of the problems that beset America and to chart courses that will enable Hadassah, together with other organizations and groups, to help promote unity and equality of opportunity for all Americans, regardless of race, color or creed."

Former Zionist Executive Heads Council For Judaism

NEW YORK — Stuart Gottlieb, who will be 40 years old on Sept. 22, has accepted the post of executive director of the American Council for Judaism. He replaces Dr. Norton Mezvinsky, who was fired this summer.

HE HELD the position of assistant director of inter-religious affairs of the American Jewish Committee, and for a short period was executive director of Mizrahi Women, the Orthodox women's Zionist affiliate.

Dr. Gottlieb comes to the anti-Zionist organization at a time when it is badly torn over the ousting of Rabbi Elmer Berger, its executive director and vice president since its founding. A number of executive committee members are known to have resigned from the executive as a result of Rabbi Berger's dismissal.

ALSO AS A result of charges made following the dismissal of the assistant to Dr. Mezvinsky, Michael Seltzer, the president of the Council, Richard Korn, has been sued for $1 million. The Council has now been brought into the suit as co-defendant, with Seltzer charging that he was libelled.

Mr. Gottlieb's salary is $25,000. He is no relation to Bill Gottlieb, the Council's public relations director.

What do your children know about Israel?

DO THEY EVEN CARE? Here's one fascinating way to interest them in their Jewish heritage — authentic Israeli postal stamps.

The State of Israel so far has issued only some 450 postal stamps. They are beautifully designed. They commemorate the great Jewish traditions — the High Holidays, the special occasions and triumphs, the great leaders of this vigorous new nation, some of its world-famous sons.

They bring a fresh pride in Jewry, a desire to know more about a proud and ancient race.

NOTE: some of these stamps already are almost priceless. Collections begun today may reap high profits.

Start your children, your young relatives, with a gift of authentic Israeli stamps. 50 different ones for only $2.00. 75 for $2.50. A packet of 100 for $4.00.

Send a check for your initial order, which also will bring you a free, complete price list of other bargains, and get the young ones going on a marvelous educational hobby.

PEARL's Pearls

Last Sunday's glorious weather complemented the new contemporary home of Dr. and Mrs. David Silver as they entertained almost 80 members of the family as guests at a buffet dinner. Comprising members of the Efroymsen and Cohen families, the event was to honor newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Charles Efroymsen, Jr.; a welcome to the Charles Efroymsen Srs., who are here until after the Holidays from their home in Miami Beach, and an unofficial housewarming.

A Dresden centerpiece, with miniature chrysanthemums, which has been in the family for years, made a charming focal-pointed arrangement. Mrs. Gertrude Cohen, mother of both Mrs. Efroymsen Jr. and Mrs. Silver, was co-hostess of the family party.

More than 200 guests were on hand to help Mrs. Sol Goldsmith celebrate her 80th birthday. Her daughters, Mrs. Morton Wolman and Mrs. Samuel Nathan of Highland Park, Ill., were hostesses at the open house at the Wolman home.

Others having birthdays this month include Mrs. Fred Fishman and Mrs. Robert Marks. Those celebrating anniversaries this month include Mr. and Mrs. Irving Linderman and Dr. and Mrs. Morris Stoner.

SON FIRST, MOM SECOND IN ART

"I was more thrilled that Joe won first and I second, than had it been the other way around." So beamed a pleased mother, Mrs. Harry Traugott, after her son won first prize in the student division, and she, second, in the professional division at the recent State Fair Art Contest. Mrs. Traugott's painting was a pastel entitled "Basket with Pineapple" and Joe Traugott's winning entry was an impressionistic charcoal simply named "Charcoal No. 3." He is presently studying art at the Rhode Island School of Design.

GOING... GOING... GONE — PLACES

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kiser are one of the first to sign up for the National Council of Jewish Women's Tour going to London, Rome and Israel on Oct. 20. Mrs. Kiser hopes to bring back much knowledge of Israel to her students at the Indianapolis Hebrew Congregation where she teaches Sunday School. For her wardrobe, she plans a basic suit with "a million shells to go with it."

Mr. and Mrs. Hans Mendelsohn have left for a trip to the Scandinavian countries of Norway, Sweden and Denmark. They will be gone a month.

On a Dutch boat headed for a university called Aix-en-Provence in southern France is Margery Cahn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cahn. Miss Cahn will be taking her junior year in college while still receiving credit from Washington University in St. Louis where she will return for her senior year.

Miss Cahn's brother, Joel, who was taking graduate courses at the University of Oregon, has joined the Army Reserves at Camp Polk, La.

Also joining the Reserves at Camp Polk was Stephen J. Spitz, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Spitz.

A WELCOMER FOR NEWCOMERS

Mr. and Mrs. David Pitchenik are newcomers from Princeton,

N.Y. Pitchenik is a patent attorney and has a law degree from George Washington University and an engineering degree from the University of Virginia. Mrs. Pitchenik is a math major from Caldwell College and is teaching computer processing at Lear Seigler Institute. They have joined the Indianapolis Hebrew Congregation. In comparing Indianapolis to New York, she pointed out that the only difference was that the "big city" has 100 of everything, while here there is only one, but it's here, you just have to look for it.

Former Chicago residents Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Lazar are now living at the Chateau de Ville. They have two children, Michael, a graduate of the New Mexico Western University in Silver City, N.M., now teaching junior high school in Round Lake, Ill. and Sandra, a freshman at Arizona State University. Mr. Lazar is a carpet salesman.

Here only two weeks to begin teaching at JEA are the Israel Israelovs. Mr. Israelov is an Israeli Sabra and Mrs. Israelov is from New York. Their two children are Jerry, 4, and Arthur, 2.

Israelov, a tenor, will be assisting Cantor Jade with the High Holiday Services at B'nai Torah Congregation. Mrs. Israelov is an exponent of Israeli folk dancing and also is a pianist. But, her problem of the moment is learning to drive. PERSONS, PLAUDITS, AND PLUGS

Brandeis famous adage "New Books for Old" is true to its word. Reports are, that within the "big tent" at 86th and College, both the new and the old books are selling to the tune of close to $1,200 in two days. The Book Sale closes Saturday night.

No one is superstitious at Broadmoor as the Women's Bowling League begins on Friday, Sept. 13. To be a bowler with Broadmoor, call Mrs. Sigmund Brenner at 255-0996.

The results are in and one of the trophies will be given to Myron (Mike) Kirsh, winner of the Men's Club Championship. It's an especially meaningful victory for Mike as he was told at the beginning of his golf career, that he would never be a good golfer, he had very bad co-ordination.

The women too, have been busy with their tourneys and the winner of the 18 Hole Women's Golf Group was Mrs. Stanley (June) Herman. The 9 Hole Women's Golf Group will present the Champions Trophy to Mrs. Alvin (Betty) Raphael. Mrs. Harry (Trudy) Sidrow was winner of the First Flight Golfers and Mrs. Al (Sally) Morris winner of the Second Flight.

His wife, Jackie, in talking with us pointed out that Mike's winning of the golf championship was hard in coming to Mike. It took 15 years of much practice on Mike's part but the winning of the top prize made it all worth it.
